HESS WANTED TO SEE SCOTS DUKE

PEACE TALKS SUGGESTION

HOPED TO RETURN IN TWO DAYS

RUDOLF HESS flew to Scotland, according to the Press Association, in an attempt to meet the Duke of Hamilton. His destination was Dungavel, the Duke's seat, in Lanarkshire, and he overshot it by a dozen miles and came down at Newton Mearns, Renfrewshire, about seven miles from Glasgow.

He told farm people after he landed that he had a message of great importance for the Duke.

The Press Association Diplomatic Correspondent writes:—I understand that Herr Hess has talked freely and has given the British authorities a considerable amount of data that can be catalogued as "highly useful information."

German reports published in Stockholm confirm the view that Herr Hess hoped to visit the Duke, whom he had met at the Berlin Olympic Games in 1936, and whom he regarded as "a twin soul." His object, it is stated, was to try to start a peace movement.

A German semi-official statement says that Herr Hess left a considerable number of notes behind him, from which it might be deduced that he thought himself in a position to reach a peaceful understanding between Germany and Britain, and adds: "The motive of his action, which was in complete misunderstanding of the actual possibilities. . . can only be explained by the existence of mental derangement."

A Berlin despatch to New York says that Herr Hess had planned to return to Germany within two days.

Some months ago Herr Hess wrote to the Duke, who immediately placed the letter in the hands of the authorities in London.

THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

WHAT HE TOLD PLOUGHMAN

Ringed in blue pencil on the map on which Rudolf Hess had plotted his course from Augsburg, in Southern Germany, to Scotland was "Dungavel," the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, near Strathaven, Lanarkshire. There the thick blue line across the North Sea from the European mainland ended.

When in the gathering dusk of Saturday night Hess made his dramatic "crash" landing at Newton Mearns, Renfrewshire, some seven miles from Glasgow, the first thing he asked Mr. David McLean, the ploughman who assisted him out of his parachute harness, was the way to Dungavel.

He had mistaken a large house he had sighted as the mansion he was seeking, and, failing to find a suitable landing ground, decided to descend by parachute. Despite his damaged ankle, he wanted to be taken to the Duke's house, which he thought was near by.

According to Mr. McLean, he did not say why he wanted to see the Duke, but he was obviously very anxious to do so.

Hess had overshot his destination by about a dozen miles. The Duke is rarely able to get to Dungavel, although it remains his home. His occasional visits are only of a few hours' duration. He was not at Dungavel on Saturday night.

MESSAGE FOR DUKE

Hess said that he had a message of great importance to deliver to the Duke of Hamilton, with whom he had been previously associated, and who shared his interests in ski-ing and flying, and in whose exploits in flying Mount Everest he was particularly interested.

He said that when the Duke was Marquis of Douglas and Clydesdale he knew him well, and that he had flown to Scotland and made his estate his objective.

He stated that he had made the most painstaking preparations for his flight from Germany. This statement was borne out by the maps he had used for navigation, on all of which the Duke's estates were ringed in a circle. It was a tribute to Hess's capabilities as a pilot that he should arrive in Scotland and land at a point in such close proximity to his objectives.

GERMAN STATEMENT

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

Rudolf Hess left "a considerable number of notes" behind him before starting for Britain, according to another semi-official statement issued in Berlin, in an attempt to explain why he left the Reich. The statement runs:—

"Rudolf Hess, it is learned in intimate circles, left a considerable number of notes behind him before starting off for England. From these it may be deduced that he thought himself in a position to reach a peaceful understanding between Germany and Britain if he could succeed in 'bringing the truth to Britain.'

"The motive of his action, which was in complete misunderstanding of the actual possibilities—and in the manner in which it was carried out can only be explained by the existence of mental derangement—appears in the first instance to have been prompted by reasons of humanity, for which he was very receptive by reason of his physical ailment.

"Rudolf Hess was, naturally, not initiated in the plans of the High Military Command of the Reich, which are known only to a very small circle, but he knew enough to be convinced that the prosecution of the war by the Germans and the British to the bitter end, irrespective of what support Britain might receive, would end not only in defeat, but in destruction, for Britain. He knew that Britain had made false statements not only about the military, but also about economic conditions in Germany.

HIS NOTES

"From his notes it is indisputably established that, in his opinion, the continuation of the war by Britain was entirely due to public opinion being misled by Churchill and his gang, who, he wrote, are alone responsible for preventing peace being established, which must mean terrible consequences for the people living on the island.

"He believed, and he himself had said, that it would be possible to convince Britain of the insane attitude of her leaders if he could succeed in enlightening other British personalities as to the true position.

"Hess seemed to think Lord Hamilton, who had been known to him apparently since the Olympic Games of 1936, and near whose property he actually descended after his petrol was exhausted, was a suitable person.

"He apparently also thought that Hamilton and his colleagues in England had the necessary influence.

"Hess regarded a discussion with Churchill as useless, because he expressly remarked that he did not wish to talk to the British Prime Minister himself under any circumstances. It further transpires from Hess's notes that he was fully convinced of the success of his mission. He even believed that the necessary petrol for his return flight would be put at his disposal in Britain.

"He informed nobody of his plans, not even his family, whom he hoped to see again shortly."

HESS MAKES GOOD PROGRESS

Rudolf Hess is making good progress towards recovery in hospital. His damaged ankle is yielding to treatment, and the slight abrasions to his arm are healing rapidly. He may be sufficiently rested in a few days to leave the hospital, where, of course, his room is unostentatiously under military guard. He is reading a lot, generally light English literature and short stories. He hears the B.B.C. bulletins, and converses with the officer on guard and the nurses.

MR. KIRKPATRICK IS IRISH

Mr. Ivone Kirkpatrick, the British Foreign Office official, who identified and is still with him, is an Irishman. He is the son of Colonel Ivone Kirkpatrick and nephew of Mr. William Kirkpatrick, of Celbridge, the well-known mountaineer, who but for the age limit would have been a member of the first Everest expedition.

Mr. Kirkpatrick had many opportunities of meeting Hitler and Hess, as he attended the Munich Conference when the late Mr. Chamberlain, as British Prime Minister, conferred with the Fuehrer. Mr. Kirkpatrick, who is forty-three years of age, was educated at Ampleforth College, Yorkshire, and during the Great War was wounded at the Suvla Bay landing. After the war he became First Secretary to the British Embassy in Berlin, and acted as interpreter at the Munich and other conferences.

THE DUKE OF HAMILTON

Douglas Douglas-Hamilton, 14th Duke of Hamilton, 11th Duke of Brandon and premier Peer of Scotland, is 38. He succeeded to these titles only last year on the death of his father, and he is still best remembered as the Boxing or the Flying Marquess—allusions to his achievements as Marquess of Douglas and Clydesdale.

He boxed for Oxford against Cambridge three years running, and he has the unenviable distinction of having had his nose broken five times—four at boxing and once when he was learning to fly.

In 1933 he played a distinguished part in the Mount Everest Air Expedition, when he piloted the aeroplane that flew over the mountain. Earlier this year he was promoted Honorary Air-Commodore in the Royal Air Force—the youngest officer to hold that rank, and the only one to receive such a promotion in wartime. He had previously commanded No. 602 (City of Glasgow) Squadron.

In 1937 the Duke married Lady Elizabeth Percy, daughter of the 8th Duke of Northumberland, and so united two border families which in mediæval days were sworn enemies.

From 1930 until his father's death the Duke represented East Renfrewshire as a Conservative.

PLOUGHMAN SPURNS FILM FAME

News-reel men with cameras and sound-recording apparatus yesterday descended upon David McLean, the man who found Herr Hess. One of them wanted him to re-enact his part in a film.

"I'm no wantin' to be a film star," said the ploughman as he continued to drive his horses and harrow. "I haven't time to go to the pictures."

HITLER'S TERMS ACCEPTED

FRENCH CABINET'S DECISION

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

VICHY, Wednesday.

HERR HITLER'S terms to the French Government, in return for the concessions made recently, were unanimously approved by the Cabinet here this morning, says the Vichy News Agency.

Marshal Pétain presided, and the approval followed a statement made by Admiral Darlan on his negotiations, and his visit to Herr Hitler.

The terms of agreement include the opening of the demarcation line between the occupied and unoccupied zones for the passage of goods and securities, and, in certain cases, for the transit of French inhabitants.

It is envisaged that France's daily payments of occupation costs should be reduced by 25 per cent. from 400,000,000 frs. to 300,000,000 frs.

According to the Independent French Agency, additional terms concerned French industrial aid in re-armouring German tanks and in submarine repair work.

The negotiations, it is believed, have not yet reached the final stage, says the Associated Press.

The French communiqué is regarded as more than anything else a warning to the United States that France is committed to collaboration.

In exchange, France, it is reported, will receive various advantages, including the return of a number of prisoners who are primarily farmers, and the line of demarcation between occupied and unoccupied France may be moved north, putting Paris in the unoccupied zone, and leaving the Germans only a fifth of France.

THE HITLER-DARLAN INTERVIEW

The Swiss radio says that Field-Marshal Keitel, the German Commander-in-Chief, and Herr Von Ribbentrop were present at the Hitler-Darlan interview, which took place at Berchtesgaden. Admiral Darlan was accompanied from Paris in a special train by Otto Abetz, the German Envoy in Paris, and Commandant Fontaine, of the French Ministry of Marine.

It has been unofficially stated in Vichy, the announcer added, that Admiral Darlan is expected to leave soon for Paris, where he will have "meetings with a high German personality, with a view to putting into operation the agreement reached in principle."—(Reuter.)

CONDITIONS IN BRITAIN

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SEEKS A REPORT

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has asked for a report on conditions in Britain from Mr. James Forrestal, Under-Secretary of the Navy, who spent a fortnight in England last month, says Associated Press in a message from Washington last night.

He flew to Britain on what was described as a "secret mission" and has just returned to the United States.

The President is keeping in close touch with the Anglo-American defence production programme despite the illness which has kept him confined to bed for the past few days.

Mr. Roosevelt also conferred with Sidney Hillman, Associate Director of the Office of Production Management and trade union leader, probably on the Labour and strike problems affecting defence.

Some Senators opposing the Administration's foreign policy discussed the possibility of delaying Senate action on the convoy issue until after President Roosevelt clarifies his position.

Many expected the President's forthcoming speech to indicate whether the Navy would be used for direct convoy service.

TRAINING BRITISH PILOTS

PRESS ASSOCIATION.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

Plans for training hundreds of British pilots in the United States are being discussed by the United States War Department and the British Embassy.

If finally approved, it is learned United States 'planes and pilots will be used to give primary training to possibly 2,000 men in classes starting in mid-summer. The student flyers would be civilians, in compliance with the United States neutral status.

U.S.-SOVIET MOVE

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

A clarification of U.S.-Soviet relations were believed to be imminent to-day, when a conference was arranged for 3.30 p.m. (10.30 p.m. B.S.T.) between the Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, and the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Oumansky—the first in over a year.

Immense speculation was created by the announcement, but both American and Russian official circles were silent as to the purpose and significance of the call.

Mr. Oumansky has had frequent talks with the Under Secretary, Mr. Sumner Welles, but they have chiefly concerned U.S.-Soviet trade relations. Trade negotiations have, however, been brought to a virtual standstill because of the recent gradual tightening of export restrictions and the stoppage by America of the export to Russia of all machinery or equipment which could be utilised in American defence production.

NO U.S. SHIPS IN RED SEA

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

CAIRO, Wednesday.

Contrary to widespread reports, no American ships have yet passed through the Red Sea, but some are expected soon, according to reliable information here.

NO PROPOSALS FROM HITLER

FROM PRESS ASSOCIATION LOBBY CORRESPONDENT.

It can be said with certainty that Rudolf Hess has not come to Britain with any official proposals from Hitler to the British Government. Such views as he is putting forward are his own or those of a very small group of people in Germany. Mr. Churchill may make an early statement in Parliament on the whole position.

Questions are to be asked by M.P.s as to why the news of Hess's landing on Saturday night was held up some twenty-four hours longer than it need have been. Other M.P.s are urging that the fullest world propaganda value shall be extracted from Hess, who they hope will be persuaded to broadcast to Germany and other countries. There is a great deal of objection at Westminster to a suggestion that the Prime Minister should himself interview Hess, and such a meeting seems unlikely.

COMMENT ON WIRELESS

WHAT DID HERR HESS KNOW?

The commentator in the BBC European news to German listeners yesterday asked:

"What facts did he know which led him to break the friendship of a lifetime and to endanger the structure of the Reich he had helped to build? Evidently he must have formed a clear view of the policy which would serve best the interests of the German people.

"Evidently he must have tried to persuade the Fuehrer and his other advisers to accept that policy.

"A few months ago he was convinced that he could bring peace this year to the German people, but a very different peace. What has made him change his mind?"

TEN TIMES A DAY

Ten times a day the B.B.C. in its European news service is telling Germany all about Herr Hess, his flight to Britain, and its implications.

"We are giving them every fact we know," a B.B.C. official told a Press Association reporter yesterday, "emphasising that he is talking freely and writing, too—anything that will make them feel a bit nervous. We know that they will be listening; for they must want to hear all they can as to what has happened.

"It is not only in the news bulletins that the propaganda value of the sensational flight is being exploited. Talks also are being broadcast. There are no kid-glove methods in regard to these."

BRITISH SAY IRAQ QUIET

GERMAN 'PLANES AT MOSUL?

The situation in Iraq is quiet, said last night's British communiqué from Cairo.

Two German 'planes have landed at an aerodrome in the region of Mosul, according to the military correspondent of the official French News Agency.

"The news to hand on the subject does not indicate," he says, "whether they are military or civil machines, and it would be unwise to deduce that this means a start of military aid to the Iraqi Government by Germany."

"Egypt wishes Iraq greatness and prosperity, but deplores her constant internal strife," says a prominent Egyptian in an interview with the correspondent of the Turkish Anatolia Agency, quoted by P.A. "In Iraq's interests, we hope for a prompt re-establishment of cordial relations between Baghdad and London.

Sayid Naji Shawkat, Minister of Defence in the Iraqi Government, had an interview yesterday with the Soviet Ambassador in Ankara and with President Ineunu, reports Toulouse radio.

SINGLE AIRCRAFT RAID ENGLAND

The British Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security last night stated:—

"There has been some enemy activity over this country to-day. Bombs were dropped by single aircraft at points on the South Coast, in the East Midlands, and in Eastern England. Little damage was done, and the number of casualties was small.

"One enemy bomber was destroyed whilst raiding this country last night (May 13-14).

"It is now known that another enemy aircraft was shot down by anti-aircraft gunfire during daylight last Sunday, May 11, making a total of six destroyed that day."

A German raider, taking advantage of low clouds, flew over an East Anglian town yesterday evening, and then dropped a number of high-explosive bombs, says the Press Association. There were no casualties. Anti-aircraft guns opened fire, and the raider made off with Royal Air Force fighters in pursuit.

NEW OUTBREAKS OF FOOT-AND-MOUTH

Five outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease were confirmed in the twenty-six counties yesterday—three at Ballingarry, Thurles, County Tipperary; one at Freshford and one at Tullaroan, County Kilkenny.

MR. EDEN REVIEWS FOREIGN AFFAIRS

WHY JAPAN CAN HAVE NO AID

MR. ANTHONY EDEN (British Foreign Secretary) reviewed the foreign front in the course of his reply to questions in the House of Commons yesterday.

His review included a warning to Japan, a statement on British relations with China, information in regard to Iraq and Syria, and a reference to the recent agreement between the French Government and Germany.

JAPAN

I have instructed our Ambassador in Tokyo to reply to the Japanese complaints of the economic restrictions in British territories by saying that, while our main object is to conserve supplies for our war effort, and prevent those supplies from reaching our enemies, we are naturally influenced in deciding our economic policy by the attitude of the Japanese Government towards our interests in China. They cannot expect any help until they treat our interests in China with proper consideration.

CHINA

The British Government and the National Government of China at Chungking are on terms of the closest cordiality and co-operation. Engaged as we are in a life and death struggle against aggression in Europe and the Middle East, the efforts of China to resist foreign domination and preserve her independence have a natural appeal to the people of this country. The Government will continue to do what they can in the future to help China to maintain her independence.

FRANCE

Whatever Admiral Darlan may have agreed to, I find it hard to believe that the French people, helpless as they may be to prevent the systematic German spoilation of their resources, will be so false to their noble traditions as to work actively of their own free will for the German cause, and thus prolong the period of their own sufferings and postpone the day of their own liberation.

SYRIA

The recent changes in the Constitution, introduced by the French High Commissioner a month ago, have been well received. These changes are heartily welcomed by the British Government, who always had great sympathy with Syrian aspirations for independence.

The small force of the Royal Air Force stationed at Habbaniyah, having successfully beaten off the attack of the Iraq forces under the orders of Raschid Ali, are now in control of the whole area around the Cantonment. Both they and the military forces at Basrah are being rapidly reinforced, and vigorous air action is being carried out by the Royal Air Force against military objectives throughout Iraq. These will be continued. The Government are convinced that the action of Raschid Ali and his supporters in launching an attack upon a loyal ally of their country is not upheld by the Iraqi people as a whole. The Government have never had and have not any intention of threatening the independence of Iraq. Their sole desire has been to safeguard their legitimate treaty rights, which rights it is their intention to maintain.

GREEK SHIPS AT ALEXANDRIA

Sir Victor Warrender (Financial Secretary to the Admiralty), replying to a question, said that as was to be expected, in view of the very active and gallant part played by the Royal Hellenic Navy during recent operations in Greek waters, some losses were suffered, but a number of extremely useful and modern vessels arrived safely at Alexandria. He did not think it advisable to publish further details.

The House then went into secret session to debate economic warfare.

COMMONS MAY USE HOUSE OF LORDS

Lord Moyne, Leader of the House of Lords, at its meeting yesterday, said: "We should do everything in our power to make easy the position of the House of Commons, and I may, if it seems the best way out, ask the leave of His Majesty that we vacate our own Chamber and move into the Royal Gallery."

He moved a resolution, and it was carried, assuring the Commons that the House of Lords "shared to the full the grief and indignation aroused by the ruin of a place of meeting so long and intimately associated with the liberties of Britain and the spread of free institutions under the Crown."

CONFERENCE ON UNEMPLOYMENT

TO BE HELD IN DUBLIN TO-DAY

A conference has been called by the Minister for Industry and Commerce for to-day to consider the question of employment in the light of the present position.

Representatives of the Irish Trade Union Congress, Federated Employers, Ltd., and Federation of Irish Manufacturers, Ltd., have been invited to discuss the steps that could best be taken to deal with unemployment following on the shortage of supplies; the desirability of prolonging employment for as many workers as possible for as long a period as possible, and the desirability of requesting firms to avoid overtime, and the possibility, in certain cases, of short time working, or working on a rotational basis, subject to the exigencies of each industry.

The Minister for Industry and Commerce, in the Dail yesterday, said that the invited bodies had been informed that he considered it necessary to seek their advice and help on how best to operate schemes of short time or rotational employment, and to what extent, under existing or revised regulations under the Unemployment Insurance and Unemployment Assistance Acts, the Department could help in prolonging employment.

During recent raids on Isondon the Law Courts—twice hit previously—and the Royal Society of Arts buildings were damaged.

THREE-POWER PACT CONFERENCE

ROME, Wednesday.

A conference of the three major nations of the Three-Power Pact (Germany, Italy and Japan) was reliably understood to have been held here during the past few days.

Some observers said the prospect of the United States becoming involved in the war through the convoy question was probably the major topic.—Associated Press.

SHARP ATTACK ON HELIGOLAND

BUILDINGS FIRED AND SHATTERED

"AIRCRAFT of the Bomber Command struck a sharp blow at Heligoland in full daylight on Tuesday last, when they attacked in line abreast at 150 feet," says the British Air Ministry News service.

"Before the defences could open up our pilots had seen their targets and were bearing down upon them.

"Covering the fortified area of the island, our aircraft dropped sticks of high explosive bombs. Columns of smoke, mixed with dust and débris of shattered buildings, rose immediately, and spread over the ground to obscure the cliffs.

"It was the perfect theoretical raid carried out in practice," said the pilot who led the attack. "We came in at exactly the right spot, after more than two hours' flying. Below us we saw the targets as we had seen them on the photographs in the briefing room. We dropped our sticks almost simultaneously. Many fires followed the attack.

"During the attack front and rear gunners poured bullets into streets and naval barracks. A German flying boat which appeared above our aircraft was also machine-gunned."

BOMBS ON OSTEND AERODROME

"Ostend Aerodrome was attacked by Royal Air Force fighters at about dawn to-day (Wednesday)," states the Air Ministry News Service.

"One pair of Hurricanes swept across the aerodrome at one hundred feet. A squadron-leader gave a short burst at a large hangar, and saw a brilliant red explosion.

"An Australian pilot officer who was following closely fired two bursts at a barrack block and hangars, and another pair of Hurricanes, flying low over the Belgian coast, fired at gun-posts between the aerodrome and the sea. They silenced several, and caused casualties to the crews.

"Our fighters flew through intense anti-aircraft fire, but suffered no damage, and all returned safely."

TURKISH VIEW ON SYRIA

Discussing the possibility of a German drive for the Suez Canal through Syria, the Turkish newspaper, Yeni Sabah, says, according to the independent French News Agency: "How the Germans get to Syria is their own affair, but it will not be by sending troops through our territory. We know that for certain."

The paper considers that the Germans could not land troops in Syria without the complicity of the French authorities, and refuses to admit that General Dentz, the French High Commissioner, would deliver Syria up to Germany, even if he received the order from Vichy.

"Turkey also has something to say in the matter," the paper adds. "We doubt whether a German army installed in Syria would be a very agreeable neighbour for us."—(Reuter.)

MORE BRITISH PRESSURE

GERMANS FAIL IN DESERT EFFORT

British Imperial forces have taken the initiative in the Western Desert, following the failure of the five-pronged thrust launched by the Germans on Monday, says the Press Association from Cairo.

British mechanised patrols are pressing home their attacks in the Sollum area and harassing Axis columns surrounding Tobruk. Military circles in Cairo consider that the German thrust was planned to throw out of gear the armoured patrol tactics being adopted to an ever-increasing extent by the British.

The blazing heat in the battle zone, where the temperature is again shooting up, is likely to militate against widespread operations.

Confidence is expressed in Cairo that whatever tactics the Axis forces choose to adopt will evoke a vigorous response from the British forces.

PREPARING ATTACK

An authoritative spokesman in London yesterday said that the Axis forces were virtually inside their own frontier, building up a force with the obvious intention, if possible, of attempting to push on to Egypt. The British were taking every opportunity of darting in, giving a stab, and then darting out again before their opponents can bring up heavier forces.

The Cairo communiqué yesterday read:—

Libya-Tobruk — During a limited offensive operation carried out by our troops from Tobruk, two German medium tanks were destroyed and many casualties were inflicted on the enemy. In the Sollum area the enemy has again withdrawn to his original positions south and west of Sollum, where he is being continuously harried by our mechanised patrols.

Abyssinia—In spite of road obstruction and other physical difficulties, our two forces converging on Amba Alagi are making satisfactory progress. In the lakes area south of Addis Ababa further success has been gained by the capture of a strongly defended enemy position. Prisoners taken number 500, together with two batteries of artillery, five light tanks, and one anti-tank gun. Our troops have also occupied Algi, an important post north of Yavello. On the Neghelli-Dalle road pursuit of the enemy is continuing. In an action on May 12th with an enemy rearguard, which was driven back with heavy losses, our troops captured over 100 prisoners.

NOT BRITAIN'S FIGHT ALONE

The German project of proving themselves overlords of the world would never be realised, said Mr. Anthony Eden, Foreign Minister, addressing the English-speaking Union in London yesterday.

Mr. J. G. Winant, United States Ambassador, said that free peoples everywhere were realising that this was not Britain's fight alone.

Mr. Eden said that Europe would never be composed of one master race and a score of subject races. "That conception is the crudest fantasy," he added.

Neither peace nor order was possible in a world subject to a German overlord or any other overlord. Great Britain and the United States shared the same traditions. Rather than yield up the faith in which they believed they were prepared to suffer whatever German military might could impose.

Mr. Winant said: "The freedom-loving, peace-loving peoples of this earth are coming to realise that this is not Britain's fight alone. On the wise use of the navies of the world may hang the destinies of free peoples."

Remarking that the mere statement of the sinkings of ships from America did not tell the whole story, he said: "It only proves, as does the successful transport of troops to the Middle East, the protective power of an adequate convoy. Let us stop asking ourselves if it is really necessary to do more to-day," he said. "Let us, all of us, ask ourselves what more we can do to-day, so that we may have less to do and sacrifice to-morrow."

CLAIM TO A PENSION

CLERK'S ACTION AGAINST BANK

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE GAVAN DUFFY.)

Having heard evidence on behalf of Thomas J. Hanefey, 79 North Circular road, Dublin, in his pension action against the National Bank, Ltd., Mr. Justice Gavan Duffy dismissed the action without calling on counsel for the Bank, and, as the Bank did not ask for costs against Mr. Hanefey, he made no order for costs against him.

In his action Mr. Hanefey claimed declarations that from June 26, 1911, till April 10, 1936, he had been a permanent official of the bank within the meaning of an agreement between specified banks and him and the Irish Bank Officials' Association of December 4, 1919, and of an award of June 29, 1921, of arbitrators who had been appointed to determine what the scale of pensions and retiring allowances should be and the terms on which they should be paid on the retirement of male officials who were on the permanent staff; that the rules accompanying the award were a term of his employment; and that he was entitled to a pension calculated in the manner provided in the award.

He stated that he had been employed as a clerk in the solicitors' department of the bank, and that on his retirement on April 10, 1936, he was entitled, under the provisions of the award and the rules accompanying it, to a pension calculated at the rate of twenty seventy-fifths for the first fifteen years' service, with an additional one seventy-fifth for each additional year's service up to forty-five years' service.

The defence was a denial that Mr. Hanefey ever had been employed by the bank; a denial that he was entitled to any pension; and pleas that his employment as solicitors' clerk did not come within the scope of the agreement; and that if he had any right to an award it now was barred by the Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Act, 1853.

Mr. Lavery, K.C., Mr. Michael J. Ryan, K.C., and Mr. Andreas O'Keeffe (instructed by Messrs. Arthur Cox and Co.) appeared for Mr. Hanefey; and Mr. Overend, K.C., Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C., and Mr. Vaughan Wilson (instructed by Mr. P. C. Furlong) for the Bank.

£175 DAMAGES FOR FARMER

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MARTIN MAGUIRE AND A JURY.)

On the findings of the jury, judgment was given for £175, with costs, in favour of Michael Daly, farmer, Rathoney, Athboy, in his action against Gerard Sweetman, solicitor, Raglan road, Ballsbridge, Dublin, for damages for injuries suffered by him when he was struck by Mr. Sweetman's motor car in Dawson street, Dublin, on November 1 last.

Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C.; Mr. Moriarty, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Mooney (instructed by Mr. Terence Doyle), appeared for Mr. Daly and Mr. Costello, K.C., Mr. McGonigal, K.C., and Mr. E. T. Sweetman (instructed by Mr. H. Sheil), for Mr. Sweetman.

CYCLIST TO BE PAID £425

(BEFORE THE PRESIDENT OF THE HIGH COURT.)

By consent judgment for £425 was given in favour of James Howard, motor mechanic, Thomastown, Kilmallock, in his action against James O'Rourke, victualler, Lord Edward street, Kilmallock, for damages for injuries suffered when he was struck by Mr. O'Rourke's motor car while he was cycling near Charleville, County Limerick, on May 1 of last year.

Mr. Michael J. Ryan, K.C.; Mr. Michael Binchy, K.C., and Mr. J. McMahon (instructed by Mr. John J. Power), appeared for Mr. Howard, and Mr. William Fitzgerald (instructed by Mr. Robert Geary), for Mr. O'Rourke.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT

The case was dismissed under the Probation of Offenders Act against Hugh Quinn, Mardyke Garage, Howth road, a private in the Defence Forces, who was charged with stealing 2/10 worth of petrol from an Army bus at Collins Barracks on April 26 last.

ENTERTAINMENT TAX BREACHES

(BEFORE DISTRICT JUSTICE McGANN.)

Thomas McGrath, proprietor Rotunda Ballroom, was fined £50, mitigated to £12 10s. 0d. on each of two summonses for not paying correct amounts of entertainment tax and £50, mitigated to £12 10s. 0d. for not producing his records for inspection.

SPECIAL CRIMINAL COURT

PETROL COUPONS CASE SENTENCES

Imposing sentences yesterday in the case of four men who were found guilty of conspiracy to forge petrol coupons, and with having forged coupons for the months of March and April, the President of the Special Criminal Court, sitting in Collins Barracks, said that the Court did not regard them as the principals in what had been described as the "petrol racket."

The accused men were Joseph Delaney, Tolka road, Dublin; Hermann Langedorf, Lower Kimmage road; Noel Collins, Highfield Park, Dundrum; and George Maher, 7 Church avenue, Sandymount.

Delaney was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment; Langedorf to six months, Collins to four months, and Maher to three months. In the case of Maher the Court ordered that he be released upon entering into bail to be of good behaviour for two years.

Mr. G. D. Murnaghan prosecuted for the State; Mr. Sean MacBride (instructed by Messrs. Lehane and Hogan) appeared for Delaney; Mr. K. Dale (instructed by Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Co.) appeared for Maher; Mr. Felix Sherry (instructed by Mr. R. J. Sheehan) for Collins, and Captain Peadar Cowan, solicitor, for Langsdorf.

RESTRICTION OF WAGES ORDER

LABOUR'S ANNULMENT MOTION

The Labour Party proposes to move for the annulment of the Order recently made, under which increases of wages are restricted, and companies are prevented from declaring dividends above a certain standard, and from doing certain other things. The motion, in the names of Senators Thomas Foran, Eamonn Lynch and Sean P. Campbell, will be on the Order Paper of the Senate for next Wednesday.

EXTENSION OF CIVIL SERVANTS' HOURS?

The Minister for Finance, Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, will to-day confer with representatives of civil servants' organisations on the question of an arrangement by which officials of the Civil Service would work for a longer period each week. He suggests that in the emergency such an arrangement would effect a saving in overtime, as well as enabling the various departments to distribute existing staffs to greater advantage. The conference, it is understood, is being held at the invitation of the Minister.

Khosro's Smart Display in Irish Guineas

THE Irish 2,000 Guineas proved quite as great an attraction as the Lincolnshire Handicap, and the stands and enclosures at the Curragh were again well crowded yesterday. Five horses were well supported, including the winner, Khosro, who, coming with a late challenge, quickly settled the pretensions of the favourite, Apocalypse, who had made most of the running. Etoile de Lyons and Sol Oriens had a stern battle for third place, the former just prevailing. The race was run at a good pace, the time being 1 min. 39 1-5 secs., and Khosro proved that he had stepped up considerably on his two years old form, for last year he won only one race at the end of the season. A son of Sir Cosmo and Straight Sequence, Sir Percy Loraine's colt was staying on well at the end of the race and should be a strong contender for both the Irish Derby and Irish St. Leger, in both of which he is engaged.

Backers made a bad start when they laid odds on Jungle Cat to beat a big field for the Ruanbeg Maiden Plate. Sir Percy Loraine's filly was never in a prominent place, and, after Hyskeir had made most of the running, Mobilisation loomed large in the picture, only to be overhauled close home and beaten by Lemon and Grey. This grey daughter of Bosworth—owned and bred by Lord Adare, was the fourth winner turned out by M. C. Collins at the meeting.

Sir Harold Gray's Wishful Thought, who disputed favouritism with Blue Mountains for the Beginners' Stakes, was always travelling like a winner, and when challenged by Tayanglet, had only to be roused by Joe Canty to draw out and win in easy style.

Theatre Royal, who, prior to running in the Rathbride Selling Plate was purchased by Mr. F. More O'Ferrall and carried his colours, was another favourite to disappoint. Never so well placed he swerved across the course at the half-way stage, and was well beaten by both Magrew and Chain Bridge. No mistake was made by backers, however, when they laid odds on Miss Paget's Somerset for the Pollardstown Plate, the son of Orpen winning in easy style. The well-backed Benedict also justified favouritism by winning the Enniskillen Memorial Plate, and gave Joe Canty his second winning mount. Details:—

Newmarket Probables

LINKLATER, probably the best sprinter at present in training, is to compete for the Spring Stakes at Newmarket to-day. He won the corresponding event last year, and it is with confidence that I expect him to complete the double. The Pale is sure to run well, and he is likely to prove the best of the opposition. Selections:—

Apprentices' Handicap—St. Vincent.
Bedford Plate—Fledden Field.
Payne Stakes—Planchado.
Newmarket Handicap—Eurasian.
Sprint Stakes—Linklater (nap).
Norfolk Plate—Melwell.
DOUBLE—Linklater and Planchado.

Franco-German Accord

According to the latest reports from Vichy, agreement in principle has been reached between the French and German Governments on the subject of Franco-German collaboration. Ever since the armistice last June negotiations have been in progress between Vichy and Berlin. For obvious reasons the Germans have been anxious to keep on the best possible terms with France, and certain French politicians with conservative tendencies are convinced that the only hope for their country lies in the closest co-operation with her powerful neighbour. It must be remembered that France at the moment is a conquered country. Her collapse last summer was without parallel in military history; and the men who found themselves responsible for the welfare of her people were faced with an almost impossible task. They never have been free agents, because at any moment the Germans might have occupied the whole of France, including the Mediterranean ports; and, in all the circumstances, it must be admitted that Marshal Pétain and his colleagues have made a reasonable success of their thankless job. From the beginning the old Marshal has insisted that collaboration with the Germans must be kept strictly within the four corners of the armistice agreement. He has resisted every attempt to persuade the French Government to take active steps against Great Britain, and, although diplomatic relations between Vichy and London ceased to exist after the Mers-el-Kebir incident, when units of the French Fleet were attacked by the British Navy, Marshal Pétain never has agreed to anything that might prejudice the British cause. The precise terms of the present agreement have not yet been disclosed. It appears that Admiral Darlan, Marshal Pétain's right-hand man, went last week by special train with Commandant Fontaine, of the French Marine Ministry, to Berchtesgaden. They were received by Herr Hitler, who had with him not only Herr von Ribbentrop, his Foreign Minister, but also Field-Marshal Keitel, titular chief of the German Wehrmacht. Yesterday Admiral Darlan made his report to the French Cabinet at Vichy, and, after a short discussion, the terms of his arrangement with the Germans were approved unanimously. Apparently, certain details remain to be decided; but there can be no further doubt that the principle of "collaboration" between victor and vanquished has been established. Admiral Darlan never has made any secret of his belief in this arrangement. He and the Marquis de Brinon have been wholehearted advocates of a modus vivendi with Germany, realising that the continued existence of the French Navy, of which the Admiral still is Commander-in-Chief, gave France a bargaining strength which few vanquished countries ever have had in their post-war dealings with their conquerors.

The Germans undoubtedly are anxious to secure the good-will of the French people, but they are not precisely altruists, and, besides, they are fighting a world war. It stands to reason, therefore, that any agreement that may be made between the German and the French Governments will provide for mutual advantages. If Herr Hitler makes important concessions to the French, he assuredly will expect important concessions in return. What will those concessions be? At the moment little information is available. Reasonably trustworthy sources are responsible for the statement that the Germans have agreed to modify their armistice terms in three main ways. They will change the line of demarcation between occupied and unoccupied France in such a way as to place the city of Paris under the control of the French Government, and to reduce the occupied area to one-fifth of metropolitan France. They will reduce the daily charge for occupation from 400,000,000 to 300,000,000 francs; and they will release those prisoners of war who formerly were employed on the land. It also is suggested that the rigid frontier between the two parts of France will become more elastic, and that the freer passage of goods, securities and individuals from one to the other will be facilitated. From the French point of view such concessions will be of immense value. The line of demarcation between occupied and unoccupied territory has had a crippling effect on both portions of the former Republic; and anything that will tend to restore traffic in goods and services between them will be welcomed by every Frenchman. From the point of view of the outside world—and, in particular, from that of Great Britain and the United States—it is not so much what France will get as what France will give in return. Already a kind of cartel arrangement has been made between the German, Italian and French motor car industries, whereby French factories will be employed at full time in the production of motor vehicles. It is indicated now by Swiss observers that the French may agree to help the Germans in the re-armouring of tanks and armoured cars, as well as in the repairing of submarines. Until some authoritative announcement is made all such statements should be accepted with reserve; for Marshal Pétain hitherto has been most punctilious in his insistence that France shall do nothing of her own free will to injure British interests, and, apart altogether from this aspect of the case, no sane Frenchman will wish to do anything to offend opinion in the United States. The Germans are known to want two main concessions from France. One is the free passage of troops to Spain, in the event of a possible attack on Gibraltar; the other is use of France's Mediterranean ports. It is obvious that the grant of either of these concessions would involve a drastic change in France's attitude towards the war. For all practical purposes, it would align her with the "Axis" Powers; but, so far, there is no reason to believe that the Hitler-Darlan agreement makes any such provisions.

Oranges and Lemons

The news that a cargo of oranges and lemons has arrived in Dublin from Spain was received with widespread interest by all types of people. Many women, no doubt, looked to see if they had an ample supply of jam-jars in their kitchens, while the men-folk indulged in pleasant contemplation of the joys to come. Home-made marmalade and jam always have been popular in Ireland, but, owing to the extremely high prices of fruit, very few people were able to make jam or marmalade this year. The cargo of oranges and lemons, which includes also a large amount of orange pulp and apricot pulp intended for jam-making, should do a great deal to relieve the shortage, which has been troubling housewives and manufacturers alike. The cargo is not as large as might be desired; for the orange season is drawing to a close in Spain. Most of the fruit already were over-ripe at the time of packing, and had to be specially selected for transport overseas in order to include only those likely to survive the trip. Extra freight charges and heavy marine insurance, which, it is estimated, amount to roughly ten times the normal charges, also contributed to the expense of the cargo, and as a result of these factors, the oranges will have to cost rather more than they are worth. In the present circumstances, however, we cannot complain; we are lucky to get any at all. The ship, it is interesting to note, was Irish-owned and Irish-registered, and it flew the Irish flag. The same ship brought a similar cargo in February. In addition to oranges, lemons and fruit pulp, the cargo also included a certain amount of wine and a small supply of onions, which have been almost impossible to obtain. The onions will be sold at a price of about 1s. 6d. a pound. In all, the ship carried about seven thousand cases, four thousand of which contained a cwt. of oranges apiece. In this way about 448,000 oranges will be on the market shortly, and some, at any rate, of the housewives will be able to make marmalade. For those who cannot obtain oranges, orange pulp also will be on sale, and, according to an advertiser, 11 pounds of fruit pulp will make at least 36 pounds of marmalade. It is a strange trick of fate that the arrival of a boat-load of such unromantic objects as oranges and onions should receive more space in the newspapers than the announcement of a film star's third or fourth experiment in marriage.

Mr. MacEntee's Apologia

The Minister for Industry and Commerce was in one of his less arrogant moods yesterday, and his speech on the Budget resolutions was the better for it. Mr. MacEntee went so far as to apologise for his colleague's Budget: it was more severe, he admitted in effect, than the Government could have wished, but in the circumstances what could be done? He made, however, an honest defence of the new "stand-still" Order in regard to wages. Thousands of Irish workers are employed in the so-called "sheltered" industries and occupations—industries and occupations, that is to say, which have not to face the fierce blast of competition, and are thus in a more or less privileged position. Most of these industries—though not by any means all of the many that are included under the "stand-still" Order—pay good wages, and there is no great likelihood that they will be forced to close down: their employés, on the whole, are substantially better off than the rank and file of their fellows. Is it reasonable, asks Mr. MacEntee, that these employés—not to mention the shareholders and directors of the same industries—shall be permitted to drive prices upwards? The prime fact confronting everybody at present is that the cost of living is on the increase; the Budget alone has added to it, and various industries, through lack of imported raw materials, are compelled to employ more costly methods of manufacture, which are bound to be reflected in the price of their finished wares. Everybody pays more for the privilege of living in these days. The country can cope with the situation in either of two ways: either it can approve a general increase of wages, which leads in turn to higher and higher prices, or it can try to keep the cost of living at the lowest possible figure; and of these the second is the only intelligent course. Suppose, says Mr. MacEntee, that the cement workers demand, and obtain, an increase of 10s. per week in their wages. The result is that cement will cost so much more a ton; every house in whose construction cement is used will cost so much more, and an increased rent will be demanded for it; and this increase will be paid either by the occupier or by the community at large, or by both. In the end, however, the burden will fall upon the people who are least able to bear it: not merely unorganised workers, such as the farm labourers, but the very poor, whose bare existence depends upon public funds.

Any effort to make "social" capital of the "stand-still" Orders would be both unpatriotic and wrong. The workers in the "sheltered" occupations will suffer, but it is very doubtful if they will suffer as severely as the class—admittedly, less numerous—of moderate rentiers: the elderly men and women who have been trying to make ends meet on an income of a couple of hundred pounds from stocks and shares, and now lose their last hope of increased dividends. They certainly will suffer less severely than the far more numerous class of farm labourers, whose wages are tiny in comparison with those of the average industrial worker. Everybody, we repeat, will feel the strain of the coming months and years, and everybody who is wise will do his utmost to encourage, rather than discourage, the production of necessities, in order that he may not find himself in the worse position of having nothing to buy with what money he may possess. We believe, however, that the Government which has imposed the "stand-still" Orders is under a duty to do something on the other side. Price control ought not to be impossible in the case of essential commodities. It has operated in the case of bread for a long time past, and we can see no reason why it should not be applied to meat, vegetables, and groceries, not to mention the humbler articles of clothing. It would be foolish to deny that profiteering exists in every part of the country, and is almost invariably at the expense of the poor. The Prices Commission exists to check these abuses, but its machinery is slow and cumbersome, and the people, for some reason, refuse to take advantage of it. What is needed is a far more flexible method of handling the profiteer. We think that Mr. Erskine Childers made a useful suggestion yesterday when he proposed that "consumers' councils" should be set up, in co-operation with the parish committees, to investigate complaints of over-charging: indeed, a well-organised and incorruptible parish committee ought to be able to do the work for itself. Whatever the means may be, a means must be found; but we think that sooner or later the Government must take the final step—to price control. A nation at war would not hesitate, and this country must endure many of the conditions of war.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

HISTORIANS are endeavouring to trace a parallel to the case of Herr Hess, but it seems that there is none, though the case of Jean Baptiste Bernadotte approaches it, and, since after being the closest collaborator of Bonaparte, he went over to the Allies in the closing stage of the Napoleonic wars and took part in the battle of Leipzig in 1813. Married to a relative of Napoleon, he became King of Sweden and Norway. His defection from Napoleon was followed by that of others, including Talleyrand.

Westminster Abbey

The interior of Westminster Abbey presents a pitiful sight, though fortunately the destruction inside the building is not so great as had been feared. A pile of rubble lies in front of the High Altar, but the Shrine of St. Edward has not been touched, and the nave remains undamaged. Poet's Corner, the magnificent Henry VIII. Chapel, and the Unknown Warrior's Tomb, all are safe, though covered with dirt and dust. The greatest damage was that to the Lantern, just above the spot where the King and Queen sat in State after the Coronation. The devoted efforts of the firemen saved the building from more extensive damage, even though they could do nothing to prevent the wreckage of the precincts of the famous building.

The House of Commons

Among the historic possessions of the House of Commons that have disappeared are the Speaker's chair, the famous despatch boxes—one bearing the impress of the ring worn by Mr. Gladstone, and the beautiful fittings, including the memorial placques to the memory of the members who fell in the last war. The statue of Joseph Chamberlain in the Lobby has survived the attack, and the sword of the serjeants-at-arms and the wands carried by the household officers have been recovered. The uniforms which are worn by some of the officials when on duty were not so fortunate. Yesterday the officials had to wear lounge suits when they attended in the new House of Commons.

Fire-fighters' Difficulty

London is being tidied up after the great air raid, and everywhere men are busily clearing away débris and restoring light, water and gas services. The lesson of former raids had not been learned sufficiently, and the great trouble of the fire-fighters was that many buildings had been locked and barred, thus preventing access while fire bombs were blazing on the roofs. Not only were doors locked, but in many cases iron gates and barriers had been installed. Something will have to be done to deal with this state of things, since neighbouring property is endangered by such carelessness.

Egg Distribution

Lord Woolton (Minister of Food) is taking the matter of faulty distribution of eggs in hand, and is investigating it. It is inevitable that in present circumstances supplies should be below the normal, but the difficulties are increased by methods of distribution, which result in some districts being treated rather unfairly. Plans are being devised to ensure a more equitable distribution, so that the supplies available may be distributed more evenly. There has been a tendency for poultry farmers to dispose of their produce locally, and while this method may save transport it has the effect of making eggs more plentiful in country districts than in the more populous urban areas.

Concentration of Industry

The Government's plans for the concentration of industry are being developed gradually. By the end of the month a register will have been completed of every factory in Britain where more than ten people are employed. A number of the factories will have to close and the employés will be given opportunities to take up work more directly connected with the British war effort. In some cases, however, the factories may be used for the production of material required by the Government. The main purpose of the register is to ensure that the facilities for war production are increased and to bring about a reduction in the number of people employed in trades which are contributing little or nothing to the war effort.

West End Clubs

A scheme for merging a number of West End clubs is under consideration, the idea being to amalgamate four of five of them into a central body, with a home in Pall Mall, which will have a communal swimming bath, squash courts, billiards' rooms and card rooms, while each club would retain its individuality by the possession of its own coffee room. It is thought that sufficient money could be raised for a new building by the sale of sites of the several clubs concerned, and that about £50,000 per annum could be assured by subscriptions. Under present conditions, however, it seems unlikely that any progress can be made with the scheme before peace has been restored.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

An Officer Poet

I should have been more surprised to learn that Army life tends to produce poets than that several of our younger poets had dropped poetising for a while for the sterner business of soldiering.

Indeed, a volunteer friend of mine tells me that he actually took part in a conversation being carried on by four lyrical young men in uniform concerning the merits of the Auden-Spender school of writers—and this in broad daylight, with sentries and orderlies all over the barracks!

A protagonist of the moderns, and a very eloquent one at that, was Second Lieutenant Fergus N. Fitzgerald, whose first book of poems is announced and will be awaited with interest. A son of Senator Desmond Fitzgerald, this remarkable young writer is only twenty-one, and, as the publisher's advance note informs me, has already had a play, "Weep Jerusalem," performed by the University College Players two years ago.

He speaks half-a-dozen languages, and, like many writers so linguistically adept, his forthcoming work, entitled "Sennet for Coriolan," reflects this erudition, besides being unmistakably in the modernist key.

I think this is the first case on record of a young officer electing to publish his work, with the approval of the military censor, under his commissioned rank.

REFUGEE CHILDREN DIE FROM BURNS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

It was stated that the husband of the mother, Mrs. Annie Davison, had been killed in the Channel Islands, and that the mother was in the habit of going out and leaving the children, aged four years to one year.

Sir James and Lady Frazer, who died within a few hours of each other last Wednesday, were buried in one grave at St. Giles's Cemetery, Cambridge, yesterday. A Service in the Chapel of Trinity College was attended by representatives of Cambridge, Glasgow and London Universities.

Turf-Cutting Employment.—Disapproval of the conditions of employment offered to city workers on the turf-cutting schemes was expressed at a meeting of Limerick Trades and Labour Council Executive, at which a resolution was passed urging that the terms be improved, and that transport facilities and hot meals would be provided. Mr. J. Conroy, Secretary, said that the wages offered were only 50s. per week, and no transport was provided to enable the men to travel the necessary fourteen or fifteen miles a day from the city.

BACON MAXIMUM PRICES ORDER

Under a new Order made by the Minister for Supplies, and published yesterday, the price of bacon to the retail merchants will be slightly reduced. Whether, and to what extent, the consumer will benefit is not yet apparent.

The Order, which takes effect as from the 19th inst., fixes the maximum prices at which bacon, hams, etc., may be sold to retail merchants, and delivered after the date mentioned, at 142s. per cwt. in the case of unsmoked bacon, and 153s. 6d. per cwt. in the case of smoked bacon.

FEIS CEOIL WINNERS

HIGH PRAISE FOR ORGANISTS

TENORS' EVENT DISAPPOINTS

Organists had a field day at the Feis Ceoil yesterday, when thirty of them were heard in various classes at the Unitarian Church, St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, and the standard of playing was uniformly so excellent as to evoke from the adjudicator (Dr. Herbert Howells) the statement that Dublin was particularly distinguished for its organist classes.

Well-merited tribute was also paid to winners in other classes—notably the young lady who played the Bach Concerto in E to win the Catterall Cup.

There was a grand musical treat at night for a big crowd in the Abbey Lecture Hall, where three string orchestras were heard. The winning orchestra was under the baton of Mr. J. Havelock Nelson.

On the vocal side there was some pleasing, if not brilliant, ringing for the Denis O'Sullivan medal, but the tenors were a sad disappointment, due not so much to the material as to the test piece.

THE LIEDER PRIZE

The standard of singing for the Lieder prize at night amply made up for other disappointments. This test presents the stiffest task of the Feis to competitors.

The trophy was won by Miss Rita Lynch, Macroom, Co. Cork (185); v.h.c., Miss Bertha Dungan, "Elgar," Cowper road, Rathmines, Dublin (183), and Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, Castlepark, Rathfarnham, Dublin (181).

Mr. George Dodds said that the standard of the class had been excellent.

RESULTS

Denis O'Sullivan Medal (40 entries) (two Irish songs from named list)—Medal won by Miss Eileen F. Stewart, Gulistan terrace, Rathmines (174); very highly commended, Mrs. E Cole-Hamilton, Cabinarry, Ballyneety Limerick (173). Commended — Margaret Dodd, Dominican College, Eccles street, Dublin (166); Stella MacNevin, 40 Brighton square, Rathgar, Dublin (170); Helen Cowle, 4 Parliament street (170), and Dorothy O. Penney, "Colswolds," Kimmage road, West, Terenure, Dublin (169). The last-named singer was disqualified for singing a song by Charles Wood (Newcastle Fair) not in the syllabus, but the adjudicator allowed her to sing her second song.

In his adjudication, Mr. George Dodds said that nearness of laughter and tears seemed a characteristic of Irish folk songs, and he expected the singers in this class, being native, to show ready facility in emotional expression. It was their birthright.

The medal-winner had sung with beautiful expression. The voice was easily and naturally produced, the words were clear and marked by graceful phrasing.

Tenor Solos (26 entries). Tests: "Ah! Moon of My Delight" (L. Lehmann); "The Foggy Dew" (arr. Stanford). No gold medal.—1, silver medal, W. F. Dunne, 444 Howth road, Raheny (167); 2, bronze medal, Alexander Von Poots, 14 Trinity College, Dublin (165). Commended—James Arnold, 26b Nicholas street, Dublin (162), and B. J. McCloskey, 192 Clontarf road (162).

Mr. Dodds said that the competitors as a class had not properly prepared their work. In the Lehmann song they could neither control their voices nor count time. They had no business to come up and sing so badly.

Junior Piano (under 15 years of age) (41 entries)—Tests: Gigue in B flat (Bach); Scherzo in B flat (Schubert); piece at sight—1, silver medal, Marie Jones, 7 Ailesbury road, Ballsbridge (85); 2nd, bronze medal, Carmel Kiernan, 23 Mount Eden road, Donnybrook (84). Highly commended, Daphne Regan, Carrannore, Newtown Park, Blackrock; Jacqueline Coplin-Cowan, 41 Kenilworth square, Dublin; Una Herbert, 187 Griffith avenue, Dublin; Rita Joan O'Brien, 24 Bath avenue gardens, Sandymount; Aideen O'Sullivan, 5 Herbert Park, Ballsbridge; Marie Christie, 13 Spencer villas, Glenageary; Sydney M. Bryans, 5 Whitton road, Rathgar; Colette Boland, St. Michael's, Booterstown; Bithe McCann, 49 Edward street, Lurgan, and Lucy Pollock, 5 Corbidge terrace, The Burrow, Sutton. Commended for sight-reading—Valerie Walker, "Vallima," Bally.

Junior Violin (16 entries)—Tests: "Ayre" (Farmer); "Gigue" (Festing), and piece at sight—1, silver medal, Charles Maguire, 42 Prussia street, Dublin; 2, Dorothy A. Graham, Wesley College, Dublin. Commended — Phyllis McCabe, St. Ultan's, Ardbraccan, Navan; Agnes McCabe, ditto; Sydney Bryans, 5 Whitton road, Rathgar; Daniel Lillis, 425 New Flats, Kevin street, Dublin, and Hazel Ross, Braemar Park, Orwell road, Rathgar.

Mr. Spencer Ross, who adjudicated, said that for the most part the competitors met the requirements of the music. It was a most satisfactory class.

Mr. Spencer Dyke said that the first prize winner had given a very musical performance, and should really develop well.

Junior Instrumental Trio (2 entries). Test: Miniatures, 2nd Set, Nos. 4, 5, and 6 (Frank Bridge).—Frank Haughey's Trio, 76 Kenilworth square, Rathmines (Frank Haughey, Sydney M. Bryans, and Mercedes Boiger), were the only competitors.

Mr. Spencer Dyke said that they gave a splendid, well-balanced performance, which showed that great care had been taken in preparation. He strongly recommended that the Committee of the Feis should award this trio a special prize.

Senior Violin (10 entries). Tests: Legende (Delius) and piece at sight.—1st, gold medal, Fanny Feehan, 77 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin (93); 2nd, silver medal, Hugh Maguire, 42 Prussia street, Dublin (91); 3rd, bronze medal, Eva Mulreany, Convent of Mercy, Navan, Co. Meath.

Mr. Spencer Dyke said that the test piece was an admirable one, as it contained everything to prove a violinist. It was a piece difficult to interpret and needed maturity of outlook. The young players in this class had grasped its significance. The sight reading was not particularly good. The first prize winner had a quality of tone which just suited Delius. The playing was warm, glowing, and intense. He liked enormously the playing of the last competitor (No. 10). She was a potential prize-winner; was very musical, with delightful tone. However, she had disappointed him by her treatment of the last page of the Legende.

String Orchestra (3 entries)—Tests: "Londonderry Air" (arr. Hamilton Harty); "Molly on the Shore" (Percy Grainger)—1, the Hardnell Orchestra (conductor, Mr. J. Havelock Nelson); 2, Ceol Fhuireann Craoibh an Chaitlinnigh (conductor, Mr. Proinsias Ua Cheallaigh); 3, the Students' Union, R.I.A.M. (conductor Miss Dorothy Stokes).

Mr. Spencer Dykes, who adjudicated, expressed pleasure at hearing three orchestras in this class. The standard of all three was quite high. The first prize winners were better balanced and their colour was very effective. The contrasts were very effective, especially in the Grainger piece, where the accents were well marked, and the conductor left no doubt as to the composer's intentions. The ending was very successfully achieved.

Piano and String Quartet—J. Havelock Nelson's Quartet (J. Havelock Nelson, Honora Greene, John MacKenzie and Betty Sullivan), "Achill," Glenageary, was the only entry, and they were recommended for a special prize.

Mr. Spencer Dyke expressed regret that there was not more interest in this delightful form of chamber music.

Fitzgerald Cup, for Advanced Organ Playing—Won by George M. Rothwell, Rathmines Park, Dublin; highly commended, Eileen Symmonds, Westminster road, Foxrock, County Dublin, and W. G. Ebbs, 65 Strand road, Sandymount.

Organ Competition for Mrs. Ormsby Lindsay prize (5 entries). Test: Choral Improvisation on "In Dulci Jubilo" (Karg-Elert)—Won by Miss Mae Johnson, 66 Seville place, Dublin.

Senior Organ, for Woodworth Cup (11 entries). Tests: Fugue in C Major (Bach), Prelude in F (Stanford), and piece at sight—Cup won by William G. Ebbs, 65 Strand road, Sandymount; runner-up and very highly commended, Arthur V. Morley, St. Germain's, 30 Herbert avenue, Merrion; highly commended, Gordon West, Aranmore, Cunningham road, Dalkey; commended, Kenneth N. Crowe, 49 Merrion road, Ballsbridge; Robert H. Johnson, 66 Seville place, Dublin; and Muriel Mullins, 13 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin.

Junior Organ (6 entries). Tests: Prelude in B flat (Bach), a carol (O'Connor Morris), and piece at sight—1, Silver Medal, Joan Thornton, Woodley, Rathfarnham; 2, John Sullivan, Ormeau, Sea Front, Dun Laoghaire.

Dr. Hubert Howells, who adjudicated, said that Dublin was particularly distinguished for its organ class, and he had not met its like in any place else.

Small Irish Harp (5 entries).—1, gold medal—Aileen McArdle, Convent of the Sacred Heart of Mary, Lisburn, Antrim; 2, silver medal—Mary Murphy, St. Mary's School for the Blind, Merrion, Dublin; 3, bronze medal—Margaret O'Leary, 3 St. Ibar's Villas, Wexford.

FRITZ BRASE CUP

Fritz Brase Cup, for Pianoforte Sight Reading (ages 14 to 18) (12 entries).—Won by Miss Cicely Larney, 42 Highfield road, Rathgar; commended, Dorothy Kingston, Sutton; Dorothy A. Graham, Wesley College, Dublin; Edith Margaret Foster, 143 Castle avenue, Clontarf, and Dorinda Scott, 11 Neville road, Rathgar.

Mr. Gerald Moore, who adjudicated, had to recall all the competitors, and set them an extra piece before finding the winner.

The cup was presented to the winner by Frau Fritz Brase.

Mr. J. E. Geoghegan, who welcomed her, said that they were all mindful of the great help given to the Feis by the late Colonel Fritz Brase.

Solo Sight Singing.—1st, gold medal—Ethna Graham, 21 Inverness road, Fairview, Dublin; 2nd, silver medal—Norman Metcalfe, 121 O'Connell street, Limerick; 3rd, bronze medal—George M. Rothwell, 16 Rathmines Park.

Arthur Catterall Cup, for Violin Concerto (2 entries).—Test: Concerto in E (Bach)—Won by Clara Greene, Grand Canal street, Dublin (89).

Mr. Spencer Dyke, who adjudicated, said that the winner showed a very high standard, and ought to go far.

DAMAGE BY BOMBS

BILL SOON IN THE DAIL

The MINISTER FOR FINANCE (Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly) informed the Dail at question time yesterday that it was hoped soon to introduce the bill dealing with damage caused by bombs, and to make provision in it for churches, shops and institutions whose claims had been held up pending legislation.

SALE OF WHITE FLOUR

The MINISTER FOR SUPPLIES informed Mr. Norton (Labour) that the manufacture of white flour, as ordinarily understood, was prohibited except under permit, which was confined to altar bread, baby foods semolina and baking powder. A standard price, fixed by Order, for all flour produced in the country was 52s. 6d. per sack of 280lb. His Department would investigate any complaints of alleged profiteering in the sale of flour.

Asked if he was aware that white flour from Northern Ireland was being sold at 6s. 6d. per stone, the Minister said that Deputies and citizens who had a knowledge of overcharging had a duty to report the facts to his Department.

MORE TEA FOR TURF-CUTTERS

The Minister also stated that it had been found possible to arrange that a limited quantity of tea could be made available to permit the grant of a small additional allowance to people engaged in turf-cutting where they are working in organised groups at a considerable distance from their homes.

BUDGET: "A CONFESSION OF FAILURE"

MR. MACGILLIGAN TELLS THE DAIL

MINISTER ON WAGE DEMANDS

WHEN Mr. W. DAVIN (Lab., Leix-Offaly) resumed the debate on the Budget in the Dail yesterday he warned the Government that if they wished to avoid trouble they should reconsider the decision to put the Emergency Powers Order into operation. Mr. de Valera had said that the direst penalties would be meted out to farmers who did not comply with the Tillage Orders, yet in the case of the profiteers the Minister for Supplies stated that their names would not even be made public. Some of these people were selling the farmers' produce in the city at 100 per cent. profit, and the Minister knew it perfectly well. There was glaring profiteering and racketeering in all directions—there was no secret about it; but despite all the increases in prices the workers of the country would continue to receive the same wages that were being paid to them on 2nd May.

Having been called to order on several occasions by the Chair, Mr. Davin said that it appeared to be the policy of the Government to stifle criticism, and if they took that line they would be very sorry in the near future.

UNEASY TAXPAYERS

Professor O'SULLIVAN (F.G., Kerry) said that on a second reading of the Minister's Budget speech in reference to excess profits and corporation tax many people outside the House had become uneasy. Since the beginning of the war the Government had been very free from criticism and had almost complete control at this time, and if anything went wrong it would probably be due, not to too little control, but to the lack of criticism.

He was not convinced that a real effort was being made to deal with rising prices. A one-sided policy of preventing an increase in wages without interfering with rising prices was going to lead to trouble.

Mr. G. BENNETT (F.G., Limerick) said that the country could not bear a Government demand of £41,000,000.

Alderman CORISH (Lab., Wexford) said that the only things the Government really proposed to control were workers' wages. He was afraid the Government's action was going to lead to an eruption.

NEWSPAPER TAX

Alderman E. BENSON (F.G., Dublin) said that the most disturbing feature of the Budget was the Minister's statement that he had been unable to reduce expenditure, and must, therefore, bring income up to meet that expenditure.

Commenting on the newspaper tax, Alderman Benson asked was it the Government's desire to reduce circulation of the newspapers, for certainly that would be the effect of this tax. It might be that the Government desired to reduce newspaper circulations in order that fewer people might read of its misdeeds. This was a very objectionable tax, and it was particularly hard that even the ordinary little children's papers should have to bear the impost, which had just been increased still further.

Alderman Benson also criticised the corporation profits tax. It would be extremely difficult to pay tax on profits of the last two years, because most of that money had been distributed and spent, possibly on the purchase of supplies.

Mr. HURLEY (Lab., Cork) said that the pegging of wages was viciously drastic. It not only pegged wages, but pegged low wages. It was as high-handed an action as that of any Dictator in Europe. With regard to profiteering, he suggested that the system of local committees to watch for cases would be a remedy, as it was in the last war. He thought excess profits should be taxed 100 per cent.—it was only legalised robbery.

PROFITEERS' LUCK

Mr. P. McGILLIGAN (F.G., Dublin) said that until January of this year the attitude of the Government was one of complacency. They seemed to be under the impression that a Minister's duty was done when he informed the country that there was a shortage of supplies. The Budget was a confession of the failure of an effort to control prices, because half of the new revenue was expected from people who had made excess profits. The lucky people were the people who had profiteered in this country up to September, 1939; for some of the worst profiteering had taken place prior to the war. The Order to prevent wage increases was based on a realisation by the Government that the moneys which the Budget would extract would be passed on to the lower elements of the community. Production and not taxation ought to be the keynote of the Budget.

Huge amounts could be taken off the proposed expenditure for defence.

PROBLEM OF SUPPLIES

Mr. MacENTEE (Minister for Industry and Commerce) said that they all deeply regretted the circumstances of the time which made it necessary for the Minister for Finance to introduce a Budget of this kind. What other remedy had the Government in the situation which now confronted it? Deputy McGilligan suggested that the keynote of the Budget should be production and not taxation, but raw materials for most of their industries were not available. The fact was that they knew to their cost that they were not as self-sufficient as they might have been, but no undue criticism could be levelled at the Government for that.

The position is, Mr. MacENTEE said, that we are going to have a dwindling supply of essential commodities. Naturally, in those circumstances the prices of such commodities are bound to rise, and those who can protect themselves against such increases will try to do so. These are the people in sheltered occupations, people in monopolies, and people in utility industries. Even before the problem of supplies became as great as it is some of these people got increases in their wages, amounting in some industries to 9s., 12s. or 13s. a week, and some of those getting these increases were in a better position on the whole than the rest of the community, who were not able to protect themselves against these increases.

WAGES AND COSTS

Take for instance, he said, an increase to the worker in the cement industry. This would be reflected in the cost of the houses, in the rent which the occupiers would have to pay, and perhaps in the rates to be paid by the urban communities. An increase in wages to the gas workers means an increase in the price of gas and results in an increase in the household expenses of the poor. At the other end of the scale they had the position where the workers secured nothing, and a very large number of those depended on public money to relieve their poverty, and to them they could give nothing until the introduction of this Budget.

Deputy Norton stated last week that in his view 111,000 were unemployed in this country, but that, like many of the Deputy's statements, was an over-statement. The number on the unemployment register at the moment amounts to about 69,000, but he was not going to admit that all of that 69,000 were employable, were in actual need of employment, or were wanting employment. He agreed that there were a large number who did want work, and who, for the first time in their lives, were at the moment out of jobs. These 69,000 were only part of a very large number—amounting to from 320,000 to 360,000—who were dependent to some extent upon public moneys for their maintenance. They got these moneys in the form of widows' and orphans' pensions, old age pensions, home assistance, unemployment assistance and benefit, and the total amount they received in any year was about £7,000,000.

DRIVING UP PRICES

These people, if the cost of living went up, were unable, by exerting pressure upon private employers, to ensure that their standard of living would rise with prices. If prices were driven up by the action of a small section in the community they were driven up at the expense of the very poorest elements in the country. When there were increases of 10s. or 12s. a week in wages paid by some industries—industries which represented an important factor in fixing the cost of living—these increases were given in many cases not at the expense of the employers, but at the expense of the consumers, and mainly at the expense of the very poorest elements in the population.

Mr. MacENTEE pointed out that increases in prices of such foodstuffs as butter, flour, clothes or boots had their greatest reaction in the houses of the poorer people, and said that they were faced with a future in which prices were going to rise and in which, for reasons completely outside the control of the Government, unemployment was going to increase. Were they, he asked, going to allow a struggle between workers who were employed to maintain their standard of living at the expense of other workers to continue unchecked, or should they say to the workers that they had orders to stand still for the moment until some method of gripping the situation was found.

Mr. W. DAVIN (Lab.)—Why don't you say that to the profiteers?

Mr. MacENTEE—We are dealing with them in a different way.

THE EMERGENCY ORDER

Referring to the emergency Order restricting wage increases, Mr. MacEntee said that most of the workers in the country realised it would be folly in present circumstances to try to make wages chase prices. They did not know how the situation facing them would develop, and they could not get control of it for two or three months.

The provision which they were making to supplement the allowances given under the Unemployment Assistance, Widows' and Orphans' and Old Age Pensions Acts was an experimental measure, undertaken with a view to the time when it might be very difficult for people with very little money to secure a share of essential foodstuffs. No matter what happened their currency, the people who got these vouchers would be assured at least of getting a supplementary supply of essential foodstuffs. Under the scheme they hoped to give to every dependent person a half pint of milk daily, a quarter-pound of butter weekly and one 2lb. loaf.

Dr. J. HANNIGAN (Independent, Dublin, South) said that the Budget was less severe than was generally anticipated.

Mr. T. J. MURPHY (Labour, Cork, West) said that the Minister ought to give an assurance that the Government had a firm conviction in favour of the control of prices.

AFTER THE WAR

Mr. E. CHILDERS (Fianna Fail, Athlone-Longford) spoke of the need for a plan to meet the difficulties certain to arise after the war, and the Government and Opposition parties should consider that they now had the time and the opportunity to form some kind of a planning committee to examine the future of the country. Since they achieved independence there had been very little change in the national income or in the total agricultural production. There had, in fact, been a considerable degree of stagnancy in our whole productive life.

He suggested that to prevent profiteering the Government should, as an experiment, set up in one or two towns Consumers' Councils, with paid part-time secretaries, which would co-operate with Parish Councils and investigate complaints and report on them. There was a danger that the money machine might break down, and they should have a plan based on plans for the transference of food which had been adopted at one time in the United States and in Germany. They should plan their post-war economy now. In other countries during the present emergency business people worked with the Civil Service. Could they afford to continue the old system here? The Dail had been for too long a conventional two-party House, and the people had become aware of that.

Mr. J. COBURN (F.G., Louth) said that the tax on tobacco might kill the industry.

GOVERNMENT AND POOR

Mr. Sean T. O'KELLY, replying, said that in real scarcity the Government thought that they would be doing the real poor a greater service by giving them these "bearer cheques," which would allow them priority in getting certain foods. It might not work out; no system was absolutely perfect. The Government's intention was good.

The Dail adjourned till 3 o'clock this afternoon.

INQUEST ON BELFAST AIR RAID VICTIM

At the first air-raid inquest in Belfast, the Coroner (Dr. H. P. Lowe) held that remains found at 14 Ballynure street, Oldpark road, were those of Mrs. Kathleen McAteer, wife of a soldier, and that death was due to enemy action.

Evidence was given as to the finding of the bodies of Mrs. McAteer's two children and other remains in the débris.

Gunner McAteer said that his wife would certainly have been with the children.

The Coroner said that Gunner McAteer had the sincere sympathy of the citizens.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE IRISH LANGUAGE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—When will the advocates of compulsory Irish understand the mentality of the Irish people and realise that, although the Irish will follow a leader to death, they resent compulsion in any form?

It is understood that one of the cures for drunkards is to give the patients alcohol in some form, mixed with their food, at every meal, and this is the method that has been adopted in the case of compulsory Irish.

The writer was interested in the revival of the Irish language and subscribed to the funds of the Gaelic League for a number of years, but when Irish was made compulsory in our schools, etc., it was realised that the language was about to be "killed," consequently no further subscriptions were paid to the League.

Time has proved that compulsion has not appealed to either the teachers or the pupils, with the result that little, if any, progress is being made with the language. If this is allowed to continue the money and energy spent on the teaching of Irish will be worse than wasted, as our young people will be driven to hate their lessons in Irish instead of taking a patriotic interest in the study of the language.—Yours, etc.,

"IRISHMAN."

Dublin, May 13th, 1941.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—One gets so sick and tired of the utterly nonsensical argument that "there is only one argument for or against Irish: it is the argument for or against nationality," that one must occasionally break out or burst. In the name of Heaven, sir, does Mr. John Dowling think that there are no nations on the American Continent, North or South? That the United States can never become a nation (unless they revive the language of the Sioux and Flatfeet, who are as much the ancestors of the present inhabitants of the country as the original Celts are of many present-day Irishmen)? That from Mexico to Cape Horn they must eschew the language of the bloody and brutal Saxon—sorry, Spaniard—before they can really claim independence? Does he think that the Swiss should yield at once to Hitler, knowing that as long as they have no language of their own their boasted (and long-fought-for!) independence is only a mirage? Mr. Dowling's friends, if not he himself, are usually inimical to the British Empire—but have they thought what would happen if it broke up? There would be Canada and Australia, two great collections of people, doomed never, never, never to be more than collections of people, unable ever to be independent nations with wills of their own
